INTRODUCTION

The darkness.

When starting this project, there was no clear vision of the final goal. The idea of a concept, how to play, and what mechanical features the game would have were established, but not the art. How Noctebris would also impact with its visuals was an open window.

Inspired by the game's own experience of exploration navigated by a hand-drawn map, I came up with the key idea that led to the visuals chosen for Noctebris. The unknown and the darkness. The spirit of exploration found within the initial idea for the game led Noctebris to take on the dark and bloody visuals characteristic of a horror game.

The dark atmosphere created for the game made it more than just a maze game. It gave it the soul of a game that accelerates the hearts of players who traverse the entire map in fear, afraid of something they cannot see.

The dark, reddish colors. The rough textures. The macabre settings. A poetry between the unknown and fear, the heat of blood running through our veins and the chills of what is behind us hiding in the dark.

This is the essence of Noctebris.

This is the Art of Noctebris.

CAMERA

The camera is one of the key factors for the player to progress in their exploration. Within a completely dark world, the camera lens is the eye to uncover the path. Its use is unlimited and will be the key for those ambitious enough to reach the end.

PRINTED PHOTO

The photo will be revealed when the camera is used. It captures the moment the player is in, revealing the path ahead. There is no limit to the number of photos the player can take, but it is also not possible to save the photos taken. Once discarded, the photos are lost forever, forcing the player to use another method to navigate the maze.

MAP

The map is another key element for the player. Exploring the labyrinth will be confusing, especially in the darkness you find yourself in. Using it well will contribute immensely to achieving the objective.

KEY

This key will be found after completing the mandatory challenges and plays an important role in...

FLASHLIGHT

The flashlight is an item that grants the player the advantage of better lighting. It is acquired by completing one of the challenges. BUT BE CAREFUL, it is not unlimited. It must be used carefully.
